E a pretty large proportion of the suntrace and yet youknow that west is a thing that has been fleering from year to year from one point to another. It was only, fifty years ago that Ohio was west, and that you people out here had to be hunted for with a telescope—we couldn't find you in any other way. Now the west is constantly moving, and it is not the west, the section of the country, but the spirit of the west that first opened, the land beyond the Allegarnys, it was the spirit of the west that left Ohio and Indiana and Illinois and crossed the Mississippi. It was the spirit of the west that left of the west that off this great west here across the Rocky mountains and developed the coast. It was the spirit of the west that off those islands out in the ocean, those islands in the far south, and carried that spirit of the west over to a people who until that time had had their eyes closed to the most fundamental ideas of liberty as we understand it. Santa Fe, N. M. August 10.—
(Special.)—Following is the speech made by the Honorable Secretary of the Interior Mr. Garfield before a large audience of representative people in the hall of the house of representatives at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon:

Mr. Garfield's Speech.

'Ladles and Gentlemen: It is indeed with a great deal of pleasure that I have been enabled to come here and have an opportunity of meeting the people of New Mexico, and of discussing with them those matters that are o'l intense and keen inferest to them, affecting, as they do, their lives and their property.

"As the mayor has well said, the people of New Mexico are of no different mould, than the people of any other but in the east, when men have talked to me about the west, that so than people there do not understand the west at ali. I do not pretend to do it when we are alone with our where and together, we never dare to do it when we are alone with our stand to the west at ali. I do not pretend to

Post Office Inspector Tells of Devious Path to Mud Deposit and Says There Was Only Lowest Grade of Ore.

Denver. Colo., August 19.—The Lost Spanish Bullion mine case is attracting much attention. This is the case in which it is claimed that a company was organized to sell stock in a mine, alleged to be located in a cave near Silver City, N. M., and in which the postal department has caused the arrest and indictment of all the officials of the company, alleging that they used the mails to defraud. The government will attempt to prove that the mine is valueless and that the company knew it at the time it was selling a large amount of stock.

Lindsey is employed by the National Advertising company of this city, which secured the contract to prepare advertising for the Lost Bullion company last fall. The story of the discovery of the mine by Spaniards at the time of the Aztec conquest in Mexico and quotations from Prescott's "Conquest of Mexico" formed the nucleous of the story Lindsey wrote for the prospectus.

On the stand Lindsey said he was employed to plan the advertising of the Lost Bullion Spanish Mines company. He went to an office in the Temple Court building in September, 1996, he said, and met C. L. Blackman & Co., and afterward went to Silver City with George DuBois to gather data for the prospectus.

Macomic then went into detail regarding his trip and the discoveries he made regarding the modum operandi of the company.

LOST SPANISH BULLION GOVERNOR CURRY IS ON THE JOB WITH

Men Who Created Prospectus Self Reliance of New Executive Gives People Confidence in His Ability.

WHAT HE SAID

Republican Leaders Met Him as Head of a Republican Administration and He Publicly Declared Himself on Points at Issue,

When the smoke cleared away to some extent, those who were hear enough to read the signs saw this much unmistakably:
Governor Curry was governor and acting for himself—he had recognized him—he had decided to run the executive office himself and to start in to do it when he got good and ready.

It did not take a magnifying glass to discover that Governor Curry was Following this conversation in the mine, Macomic said, Du Bois voluntarily made the statements submitted as evidence Wednesday, and signed them in the presence of three witnesses.

Macomic then went into detail residuation to know that Governor Curry knew the true conditions of territorial and local politics and that he intended and eventually would smooth out more than one wrinkle.

When all this percolated through the system of certain individuals. when all this percolated through the system of certain individuals, there was no further attempt to crowd little factions to the fore. The new governor said he wanted to be judged by his actions and there was a wholesome desire not to interfere with his wishes in this respect.

Open and Honest.

The republican leaders met Governor Curry in an open, honest way.
They gave him their endorsement and support and they did not ask for anything in return. It was not necessary for them to do so; Governor Curry, after taking the oath, publicly declared himself for the very things and the only things they desired—the president, the republican party, and the square deal. There was not much of a chance for those desiring anything else to break into the pow-Open and Honest. much of a chance for those desiring anything else to break late the powward and they refrained with, remarkable self control. But the thing that Governor Curry did and which did more than everything else to bring the people to him, was to display a self confidence in himself and his ability tempered with just enough reserve to impress every man woman and child that he had the reins in his hand and knew how to handle them.

Feeling of Confidence.

He distributed a broad feeling of roundence in his wisdom, ability and integrity, that it will take a whole lot of errors in the executive office undermine.

And the new governor is not a man of errors. He may make mistakes—no man lives who does not, but the
